

This October, Human Resource Management takes the Las Vegas stage

Don't miss the exclusive engagement of the International Conference on Human Resource Management at the MGM Grand Hotel. A once a year opportunity for Managers in Personnel, Payroll, Finance and Data Processing to see state-of-the-art Human Resource Management methods and information systems in the limelight.

It's the year's most prestigious conference devoted to Human Resource Management. And it's sponsored by InSci—the leader in Human Resource Software and Service Systems.

Attend the Conference. Immerse yourself in the crucial issues confronting the human resource management community. Survey your options in addressing these issues—both in terms of new management approaches and the latest data processing technology.

Discover how the latest human resource software, service and database technology create new standards of productivity for Personnel, Payroll, Financial and Data Processing Managers. See how to improve internal communications with your data processing department for stronger decision making.

And there's more: You'll hear Alan Greenspan assess Reaganomics, Art Buchwald on Washington politics, John Diebold on individual rights in our technological society. And you'll choose from over thirty panel discussions and workshops—all devoted to Human Resource Management and Information Systems, and all conducted by the leading authorities.

It's everything you'd expect from the largest International Conference on Human Resource Management ever held. It costs only $550 per person. Spouses go along for just $85 more. Group rates and chartered air service are available.

So call now for full details, complete agenda, and registration form: (201) 391-1600, and ask for Marge Greimel. Or send in the coupon.

But hurry. Registration by mail ends October 1. And the curtain goes up October 25. Make sure you're there for the premiere event of the year in Human Resource Management. If you're not, you have to wait a whole year for the next one.
